15 Defendant, Shaun Bridges, respectfully requests this Court to issue an order directing the 16 Federal Public Defender's Office to appoint the defendant Habeas Counsel for representation in 17 collateral post-conviction relief proceedings. Section 2255(g) expressly provides that a district court 18 "may appoint counsel," and that appointment of counsel is governed pursuant to authority under 19 18 U.S.C. § 3006A(a)(2)(B). This Court has considerable discretion in deciding whether to appoint 20 counsel in a § 2255 proceeding and may furnish counsel when the "interests of justice so require."
21 Good cause exists "where specific allegations before the court show reason to believe that the 22 petitioner may, if the facts are fully developed, be able to demonstrate that he is . . . entitled to relief."
23 Bracy v. Gramley, 520 U.S. 899, 908-09, 117 S. Ct. 1793, 138 L. Ed. 2d 97 (1997) (citing Harris v.
24 Nelson, 394 U.S. 286, 89 S. Ct. 1082, 22 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1969)).

1 On August 31, 2015, pursuant to a written and signed plea agreement, defendant entered a plea
2 of guilty to a two count information charging the defendant with one count of money laundering in 3 violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1957 and one count of obstruction of justice in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1512.
4 During the plea colloquy conducted pursuant to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 11, the court
5 advised petitioner that the maximum penalty for the crimes to which he was offering to plead guilty
6 was 20 years imprisonment per count based upon his plea of guilty. These statutory penalties were the 7 same as set forth in the plea agreement, which defendant confirmed he had read. During the plea
8 colloquy, however, defendant was not properly informed of the correct statutory penalties and instead,
9 the court simply restated the incorrect penalties contained in the plea agreement--a maximum possible
10 penalty of 20 years per count, instead of the correct statutory penalty of 10 years pursuant to 18 U.S.C.
11 § 1957.

12 Defendant contends, inter alia, that the court in its plea colloquy misrepresented the maximum 13 possible statutory penalty in violation of Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 11(b)(1)(H). He also 14 argues that his trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance in failing to properly advise him of the 15 correct statutory penalties, which effected his decision making process in deciding to waive his 16 constitutional rights and enter into an agreement to plead guilty. Furthermore, his appellate counsel 17 failed to identify this fundamental error and restated this same incorrect statutory penalty range to the 18 defendant and instead filed an Anders brief on direct appeal, which was dismissed on April 8, 2017
19 and thus a motion for relief pursuant to § 2255 remains timely.

20 Because the length of potential imprisonment constitutes a direct consequence of a defendant's 21 guilty plea, see United States v. Wills, 881 F.2d 823, 825 (9th Cir. 1989), the plea colloquy did not 22 satisfy the due process requirements of a voluntary and knowing plea. See United States v. Littlejohn,
23 224 F.3d 960, 965 (9th Cir. 2000) (providing that the due process requirement of a voluntary plea 24 demands that defendants be informed of the "direct consequences of their plea and resulting

1 conviction"); Torrey v. Estelle, 842 F.2d 234, 235 (9th Cir. 1988) (explaining that due process requires
 2 that a defendant be "advised of the range of allowable punishment that will result from his guilty plea"
 3 (internal quotations omitted)).

4 Defendant has identified a constitutional deficiency in his Rule 11 colloquy that may entitle
 5 him to relief under § 2255. See United States v. Guerra, 94 F.3d 989, 995 (5th Cir. 1996) (holding that 6 an overstatement of the maximum statutory term of imprisonment during a plea colloquy constituted a 7 violation of the petitioner's due process rights cognizable in a § 2255 proceeding); see also United 8 States v. Roberts, 5 F.3d 365, 369-70 (9th Cir. 1993) (granting the petitioner's § 2255 petition when 9 the district court failed to inform him of a supervised release term during the Rule 11 colloquy).
 10 Courts have found that overstating the maximum possible statutory penalty prejudices a defendant
 11 because it skews the calculation of the risks involved in exercising the right to a jury trial. See United 12 States v. Stubbs, 279 F.3d 402, 411 (6th Cir. 2002) ("When considering a plea agreement, a defendant 13 might well weigh the terms of the agreement against the maximum sentence he could receive if he 14 went to trial. When the maximum possible exposure is overstated, the defendant might well be 15 influenced to accept a plea agreement he would otherwise reject." (quoting Pitts v. United States, 763 16 F.2d 197, 201 (6th Cir. 1985)), abrogation on other grounds recognized by United States v. Helton, 17 349 F.3d 295, 299 (6th Cir. 2003); Guerra, 94 F.3d at 995 (holding that the overstatement of the 18 maximum potential sentence rendered the petitioner "unaware of the true nature of the options he 19 faced"); cf. United States v. Forrester, 512 F.3d 500, 507-08 (9th Cir. 2008) (noting that, in the context 20 of a Faretta proceeding, an overstatement of the possible statutory penalties could have made "a 21 middle-aged defendant [] more prone to roll the dice with self-representation" rather than keep an 22 attorney he distrusts).

23 Nothing in the record indicates that the defendant was made aware of the correct statutory 24 maximum penalty before pleading guilty or prior to sentencing. In contrast the information on which

1 the defendant was arraigned lists the same incorrect statutory penalty as in the plea agreement; while
2 even the Pre-Sentence Report (PSR) completed by the Probation Office lists the same incorrect
3 statutory penalty. In summary, all parties at each step of the judicial process materially overstated the 4 statutory penalty to the defendant as substantiated by the record of this Court.

5 This motion requesting the appointment of counsel is not to be construed as the totality of the 6 defendant's arguments for relief, however, it is to demonstrate to this Court that a meritorious and non-
7 frivolous issue exists that warrants the appointment of counsel. Furthermore, the defendant's unique 8 and stringent confinement status is known to the court and has been stipulated as such by the 9 government on the record before this Court. He is one of only sixty inmates within the 225,000 that 10 comprise of the Bureau of Prisons (BOP) inmate population, which are incarcerated under such 11 restrictive conditions. The defendant's access to adequate resources is limited once transferred back
12 into such confinement status, which is due to occur in the immediate future. Absent the appointment
13 of counsel the defendant would be prejudiced in attempting to file a thorough motion seeking relief
14 pursuant to § 2255. Therefore the defendant respectfully requests this Court to exercise its discretion
15 and appoint counsel to the defendant in the "interests of justice."

2 APPLICATION FOR SEALING ORDER

3 Defendant requests this Court to issue an order temporarily sealing this motion in accordance 4 with local rules as premature disclosure to the government could adversely prejudice the defendant by 5 disclosing his claims prior to being provided a reasonable opportunity for discussions with his own
6 appointed counsel. Additionally, he is represented by counsel in related proceedings where disclosure 7 of this motion could adversely effect his counsel's efforts in concluding outstanding matters in the 8 related case. The defendant contends that the government would not be adversely effected by the 9 temporary sealing of this motion until the defendant is appointed counsel and his counsel can move
10 for the timely unsealing. In the event this Court does not believe sealing is warranted in whole then 11 the defendant requests permission to file a redacted version of the motion for filing on the public 12 docket.
